Below are two assessments of the most common words in modern Spanish. Each score is based on an analysis of different text cases. The textual corpus is a large collection of written and/or colloquial language samples that have been carefully prepared for linguistic analysis. To determine which words are most common, researchers create a database of all the words found in the case and classify them based on the context in which they are used. The first table lists the 100 most common forms of words from the Spanish Corpus del Espanyol Actual (CREA), a text corpus compiled by the Real Academy of Spain (RAE). RAE is the official Spanish institution for documenting, planning and standardizing the Spanish language. The form of the word is any grammatical variation of the word. The second table is a list of the 100 most common lemmas found in the text case compiled by Mark Davis and other language researchers from Brigham Young University in the United States. Lemma is the main form of the word that appears in the dictionary. The Spanish infinitive tener (to have) is a lemma, while tiene (has) - this conjugation of the tener - is the form of the word. The Real Academy Spain List below comes from the 1000 formas más frecuentes (trans. 1000 most common forms of words), a list published by the Real Academy of Spain (RAE) from an analysis of more than 160 million word forms found in the Corpus de Cílica del Español Actual (Transl. Reference Corpus of Current Spanish), or CREA. CREA is a computerized body of Spanish-language texts and transcripts of spoken Spanish. It includes books, magazines and newspapers with a wide range of content, as well as transcripts of spoken language from radio and television broadcasts and other sources. All works in the collection from 1975 to 2004. CREA includes samples from all Spanish-speaking countries. The list of 1000 most common forms of words comes from an analysis of CREA 3.2. Multiple numbers, verb conjugations and other inflections are ranked separately. Homonyms, however, are not different from each other. CREA 3.2 was published in June 2008. To compile this list, he made samples only from sources of the 20th century, especially from 1970 to 2000. Most sources are from the 1990s. Of the 20 million words in the corpus, about one third (6,750,000 words) come from transcripts of spoken Spanish: conversations, interviews, lectures, sermons, press conferences, sports broadcasts and so on. Among the written sources are novels, plays, short stories, letters, essays, newspapers and the Encarta encyclopedia. Samples written and spoken are taken from Spain and at least 10 Latin American countries. Most of the samples were previously compiled for Corpus del Espanyol (2001), a body of 100 million words that includes works from the 13th century to the 20th. Lemma is a form of the word, as it would be in the dictionary. For example, single nouns and plurals are treated as the same word as infinitive and verbal conjugations. The table below includes the top 100 words from the Davis 5000 list. This list distinguishes apart certain articles lo and la and lo and la pronouns; they are all ranked individually. The adjectives ese and esa are ranked together (as este and esta), but the pronoun eso is separated. All verb conjugations are ranked together. The highlighted line indicates that this word is especially common in samples of spoken Spanish.
